

HARLEY MEMORIES

■ Nothing better than a little vintage cheesecake shot to round out your reading of American Iron, don't you think? This one comes from Roger Wright who explains that the smiling lady in question is his mother, Marcette. The photo was snapped in 1953, as Marcette was doing her best to upstage her husband's '46 Knuck. And just in case she has succeeded stealing the glory from the old Knuck, Roger asked that we point out the saddlebags, a couple of nifty boxes of plywood and angle iron. "Maybe a prelude to the hard bags we know today?" Roger suggests. Maybe Roger. We'll let you fly with that.
