

REEVES CUSTOM BOTTLE CAGE

Keep hydrated the easy way

YOU KNOW WHAT I ALWAYS SAY: THERE'S absolutely nothing like drinking and riding. Of course, I don't mean the sort of imbibing that's banned (to varying degrees) in practically every corner of the world. Oh, no. This is a family mag, after all. I'm simply singing the praises of being able to wet your whistle without having to shut the show down for a few minutes at a gas station or some other rest stop. Take a slug of agua and just keep on rolling. That's the way to go. And now, with Reeves Water Bottle Cage and Cozy ($34.95) it's almost never been easier or more convenient.

Developed by our friend and stainless steel guru, Mark Reeves (see Mexican Madness '07 on page 104), this new cage and cozy are definitely a cut above anything similar we've seen. To start, the cage is manufactured from 1/4" 316 stainless rod that's TIG welded and then polished to a number 7 mirror finish. Some might call that overkill, but stronger is always better. As if that's not enough, the cage is a snap-to install on any detachable Harley windshield (Mark is currently working on a cage for fixed fairings as well as V-Rods). And it mounts to existing fasteners. No drilling or fuss. All you need is a 27 Torx driver, a 3/8" wrench or socket, and about 30 seconds of your precious time. How styling is that?

One should take note of the forward, easily accessible position of the cage. Gone are the days where you might blindly fumble for your crashbar-mounted water bottle as it dangled amidst the heat of your engine getting nice and hot for you and your parched kisser. And to insure things stay really cool, the Reeves cozy is 4mm thick and made to handle up to a 500 milliliter bottle. Of water, of course.

So go ahead. Drink and ride to your heart's content. AIM
